PEPPERS AND BEANS PLANTED TOGETHER

Peppers have been sown with beans in several fields in the Canal Point district this fall. The practice is new here although it is said to be more common on the east coast, where peppers are the main crop. Peppers require a longer time to mature than beans. Soil moisture conditions are excellent here, and the work in the practice of planting these vegetables together because peppers can stand a lower water table than is required for beans, and the water table tends to lower as the season advances.

FRAUD IS CHARGED IN INLET CONTRACT

Taxpayer Brings Suit in Federal Court To Stop Payment

MIAMI, Nov. 4.—(From the negotiations of a former corporation of the Lake Worth district, the Merritt-Chapman & Scott Corp. of Delaware, in connection with the jetty work done by the corporation in West Palm Beach harbor, and negligence and carelessness of the corporation in its operations, are charged in a suit filed against them in U. S. district court by C. C. Jackson, Cincinnati, Tenn., a taxpayer of the district.

The suit asks an injunction against the corporation to prevent it from prosecuting a suit in federal court to stop payment of the corporation's indebtedness to the corporation.

The suit, that the district court be enjoined from further payments to the corporation, was filed by the corporation on August 17, 1927, whereby the district court admitted into the corporation the sum of $221,156.72, and $67,452.47, instead of the $67,452.47, plaintiff alleges was due. It is charged that the corporation was not a corporation at the time of the original contract.

Under the original contract, it is alleged, there was to be placed 74,605 tons of rock, but only 29,480 tons were placed. It is claimed the jetty were constructed in such a negligent and careless manner that they are not keeping the harbor channel free. It also charged the corporation violated its contract by beginning work at a later date than specified and leaving the work unfinished.

None of the commissioners of the district at the time of the negotiations now are on the bond.

COMMUNITY GOSSIP

Up where H. J. Chaffer comes from, corn-bread is called 'floom'.

"Georgia isn't in very good shape just now. And you notice that when Georgia goes down the whole South goes down. When times are 'n't good in Georgia they ain't good anywhere."

There's always something to worry about. Some Pahokee farmers have been called upon to pay for the loss of their crops. Not all of the honest virtues are extinct. A man wearing a celestial collar, was in Pahokee this week, as long as there remains one, capital collar in the world. He was a spark, from which Sperman, serious may be kindled to the world's weal.

A Pahokee paper about the death and burial of Billy Stewart, a Seminole Indian, was sent to the editor of the "Happy Hunting Ground" and the attention of the publisher was called to it.

"I signed," he mused, "well, if I don't get any better return on that account, I'll resign. God bless him!"

As its contribution to the nation's safety campaign of other organizations, the Red Cross will aid through the emergency stations. NEEDS FOR RED CROSS SERVICE ON INCREASE Chairman Payne Says Disaster Relief and War Veterans Make Heavy Demands.

Demands upon the public services of the American Red Cross are organized to give are increasingly heavy, and will continue to be so in the future, John Burton Payne, chairman of the Red Cross, said.

The two major services of the society—the service to war veterans and their dependents, and relief in peacetime—show each year a greater number of persons helped by the Red Cross.

Penola legislation passed recently for World War Veterans and increased allowances to all Spanish-American War Veterans, have given to the Red Cross a new and important task.

Some weeks ago I commented on the bulk of an insurance report made by Hon. W. V. Knott, state treasurer and insurance commissioner, and I contracted it with the surplus of the report on the receipts and disbursements of funds of the Everglades drainage district.

His letter makes two solid pages of the report, and it is about the insurance report but there isn't a word in his long letter about Everglades drainage district. Mr. Knott is a nice old gentleman; he is a subscriber and owns land over South Bay, but he makes no mention of the drainage district in his election campaign is over. I'm free to say that one reason Florida probably will go Republican is to elect a state treasurer who can get out of a rut, and understand the need for reports that tell some of the facts of the drainage district.

Dingfelder, A Commission
Merchant, Talks To Jersey Growers

Experiences of a commission merchant were related and the point of view of a man in that line of business given when Carl I. Dingfelder of New York addressed the New Jersey Farm Growers' Institute at New Brunswick. In response to invitation the New York Fruit and Produce Trade Association selected Mr. Dingfelder to represent it at a meeting of the members of the marketing institute.

In the course of his address Mr. Dingfelder said: "The advent of the refrigerator car, which was started in the year 1895 with an experimental attempt, when an engineer by the name of McArthur obtained the loan of several produce cars from a Florida railroad in which he built an overhead ice bunker, and the first of which I assisted in loading at Starke, Florida, was soon succeeded by the up to date refrigerator cars, which now are in general use and which certainly have revolutionized the fruit and produce industry, making it possible to supply the consumer with fresh fruits and vegetables of the most highly perishable nature the year around.

"The commission merchant has done his share by helping to advance the growing operations, advancing money to pay for seed, fertilizer and labor in anticipation of the handling of the crops to be grown, and while this method no doubt has often been the cause of over-production (one of the worst evils our industry is suffering from), many a grower has been enabled to continue producing after a disastrous season, receiving a helping hand, when he could not possibly borrow from the banks or any other source.

"The commission merchant's financing still goes a step further—when he receives consignments from the shipper, better than 90 per cent of the merchandise is sold on a credit basis to buyers of which only a small proportion have any strong financial rating, with the result that a failure among our customers is not infrequent occurrence.

"With the increased overhead costs in doing business, low priced commodities do not only show a loss to the grower, but also to the commission merchant, who sells them and whose a package of produce sells for 60 cents or less, the cost of handling it by the commission merchant through his store is greater than the revenue he derives, and on account of too great a production of certain varieties of vegetables in our fair states, this is very often the case, and when such conditions prevail, the commission merchant insists his many disappointments, realizing that his best efforts cannot satisfy or compensate the grower.

"During the evolution of the last 20 years, selling perishables has been a business that has developed with results sometimes being more profitable than others, depending on consignments, particularly with limited supplies and consequently an active f.o.b. market. But, when supplies are more plentiful than the f.o.b. demand and prices decline rapidly, then the grower will ship on consignment, expecting the commission merchant to do the impossible, often failing to ascertain which offers the best sales service.

"These methods are utterly wrong. If a grower wants to sell, f.o.b. loading station, let him do so consistently whether the market is high or low, and strike his average. If he wants to ship on consignment, he will have an opportunity to select a good firm in any market that will make an honest effort to obtain full market value for the goods he ships, but he should ship to that firm alone and not place his consignments in competition on the same market, and between fluctuating markets, at the end of the season he will be able to strike a satisfactory price, particularly if he is careful in grading and packing, and thus enable the commission merchant to whom he ships to build up a clientele of customers that will demand a quality article, and such a shipper becomes a fixed asset to the commission merchant and both have a common interest in each other's welfare.

"The latter day method of long distance motor trucking of highly perishables does not always work out advantageously as it robs both the seller, as well as the buyer, of the opportunity to gauge market conditions there being no possibility to know the quantity of any one variety that is available for any one day's supply and it often happens that the early buyer is hurt by later arrivals purchased by his competitor at lower prices and this naturally has an effect of lower values for the following day.

"The commission merchant and up to date grower are closely allied in a common cause to supply the public with nature's best tonic for health and happiness, with which kind Providence no over-abundantly supplies us.

"Our departments of agriculture, both state and national, have been and are doing wonderful work in improving the quality of growing, grading, and packing methods through their helpful advice, and it is to be hoped that a method can be devised by which the growing communities in all agricultural lines can be prevailed upon to curtail over-production which spells unpredictable results to all concerned."

DEEPER PLOWING FOR SECOND CROP

Growers who have harvested a first crop of beans are now giving thought to a manner of soil handling for a second crop of beans or other vegetables that will be profitable.

Experience has shown that it is unwise to replant in the rows in which beans were taken off; the soil must have some rest before it will yield another profitable crop, and it is established as a fact that it will not do to plow under old vines and plant on top of them, because the rot of the old vines is communicated to the new growth.

A method that is proposed for a second crop is to pull out the old bean vines, remove them from the field, and then plow the ground as deep as the power of the tractor and the make of the plow will allow. The plant-food in the top layer of soil has been exhausted by the first crop, and the idea back of the proposed method is to open up a new layer of soil further down for the second crop, to get the plant food. Application of fertilizer, or "soil correctives" or "soil amendments" is as necessary now as in the first place, probably more necessary, it overcomes any poisons that may be in the lower strata.

Finest Parchment Made In Small English Town

In Havant, Hampshire, England, there dwells a band of men engaged in making the finest parchment in the world. They possess a skill that has been passed from father to son for centuries; in fact, before Norman times men were dressing sheepskins at Havant, and at present there is one man who has worked at it for 75 years; two other men have 62 and 69 years' service behind them. One of the partners in the firm is a magic spring. Parchment making is a long process, and water plays a great part. At Havant there is a spring of special degree of chalybeate, and although chemical experiments have been made, no water has been produced that can rival this spring, which produces a parchment to be found in no other parchment.

SHAWANO

From Plantation News.

The old Shawano Tennis Club a few weeks ago was dissolved and a new club organized. Officers of the new club are Rosa Robertson, president; H. O. Barber, secretary; Joe Murphy, treasurer. A board of directors was also chosen.

The matter of improvement of the old court was taken up, and as a result a surface of concrete was given the court and high powered electric lights installed which allow night games to be played. The club made these improvements with their own funds.

An effort is being made to organize a "diamond ball" club and to have games on Sunday afternoon. This is the old game "indoor baseball" and is sure a fast one. It is hoped all those interested will turn out and show some interest. Shawano vegetable crops are looking up and work is progressing finely. It won't be long now until shipments start out. In about 30 days the first shipments will begin.

Miss Bertha Highsmith and Gene Highsmith have gone to Nahunta, Georgia, their old home, where they are attending school. The new fire hydrant and pumping system were given a tryout the other day by Fire Chief Phillips and the mess hall roof was covered in short order. A house is being built over the pump on the canal bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Badger returned in September from a several weeks visit to Berlin, N. H., and other northern points. They had an enjoyable visit in the north.

HIS HEAD IN BARREL METHOD OF SUICIDE

Farmer At Moore Haven
Worried To Death By Money Troubles

George L. Myers, for many years a resident of Glades county, committed suicide Thursday of last week at his home east of Moore Haven on the Clewiston road by submerging his head in a rainwater barrel. He left a note addressed to his wife and reading: "Addie: I want to die. I am discouraged and nervous. Can't stand up, George."

His sister, Mrs. J. J. Campbell of Clearwater, was notified and she directed that the body be sent there for burial.

The Glades County Democrat gives these details of the tragedy: "Mr. Myers had worried over his financial difficulties, the fact that he was unable to meet the payments on his new truck, preyed on his mind; his milk business, because of hard times, had become poor, and his vegetable crop had met many obstacles; and he realized that he was not in condition to cope with these problems.

"He attempted a rest cure at Clearwater a few months ago but it did not restore him to sound mental condition.

"Mrs. Myers found her husband's body a short while after the tragic occurrence; he had leaped over and submerged his head in the barrel of water. Being unable to extricate the body, Mrs. Myers turned the barrel over to pour the water out and ran for help. A few hundred yards down the road, she came upon the road crew and two of the negroes went to aid her, one driving to town for the doctor. The men rolled the body over the barrel to pour the lungs from water, and the doctor used a pulmocyst when he arrived a few minutes later, but life could not be revived."

Originators of slotted or ventilated staves. Originators of the colored hoops. (Hoops furnished either plain or colored.)

Even lapping and joining of all hoops, made possible by original and special machinery.

All material kiln dried before being manufactured.

All staves uniform in size, being sized after material has been dried. The only hamper manufactured in this way.

All hampers are smooth inside—no protruding wires to injure the hand or the contents in packing. (Compare this feature with other hampers.)

Adkins tops are the only ones manufactured which are metal banded and stay put. (See illustration.)

Adkins hampers are uniformly high grade in quality, carefully inspected, and are a product we are pleased to recommend to our grower friends.

Adkins makes but one quality—the best—and does not make a light weight or second grade package.

Beville & Oldham are here to stay, have your interests at stake, can make immediate delivery in any quantity and solicit your patronage.

Beville & Oldham

The strong winds from the north the last of October and first of November have pretty well emptied the Lauderdale canal of hyacinths this side of the South Bay lock.

Clarence Cooper and John Anjima have cleared the Belles canal of the same vegetation during those stormy two days. The Miami canal can now be reached with motor boat—thanks to their efforts.

If the exit of October and entrance of November are propitious of what is ahead for the winter, heavy undergarment will be in demand in the Glades.

The two Cooper families and both were the guests at a chicken dinner with the Covells recently. These occasional changes in diet are greatly appreciated.

been "duck hunting" before the hunting season opened. My friends, don't violate the game laws, deposes this correspondent.

With great satisfaction has everyone in our settlement read in The Everglades news of October 31 the article "The Glades and its Affairs." The editorial counsel to the settlement of Tallahassee, who have the drainage and reclamation work in charge, is plain and timely. The paper's stand on the question of increased taxation of settlers is appreciated by every owner of Glades land, whether resident or not. It is sure that we will call it such to such extent as has been practiced by the state upon these thousands of early inventors, who since 1912 paid an ever mounting tax on lands deliberately kept from remunerative use for lack of drainage.
